

Dear Barnali,

This is the very first time when I am sharing my personal feelings with someone. I don't know how & why you became so special to me, but it's a fact now. I also don't know what will you think about me on this, but I thought I should share my soul's voice with you.

Barnali, The first time I met you, it felt to me like I had found something that I was looking for. I observed that we have exactly the same thoughts, genuineness and purity.

Since that day I am continuously thinking about you and trying to figure out the best way to express my feelings, Although I don't know whether you have any space for my feelings or not, but I couldn't stop myself to ask you.

Barnali, I am a very simple, honest and hardworking guy, I don't have any fake personality. Let's give a chance to each other to understand more about ourselves. I promise you that I shall try my best to meet & fulfil your all expectations throughout my life.

You just have to dream whatever you want and the rest will be my job to make your dream come true.

Please give me a chance to prove my honesty, loyalty and dedication towards you, if in case you will figure out that I am not a person of your type, I promise that I will walk out from your life and never disturb you again.

However, it is never necessary for you to have the same feelings as I have about you, so in case you don't want to continue please feel free to write to me.

I promise you that I will always respect your all decisions, your feelings, your emotions from the deepest of my heart forever.

I will desperately wait for your reply and also request you that please not share all this with anyone, till then I wish you to have a wonderful time with or without me, forever!

*Thanks for your time.
With Regards,
Your well-wisher!*
